Description

Quarry Den Wood, as its name suggests, is part of what was Pitadro Craigs, a quarry linked to Fordell Castle estate and may have supplied stone to one of Scotland's oldest railways that ran within 500m of the woods. The Fordell railway route took coal from the Fife coalfields to the ships waiting in St Davids Bay, now part of the Dalgety Bay settlement, although this line is now long gone.

Pitadro Craigs has, over time, transformed itself into a quite wonderful little woodland and Quarry Den Wood incorporates three distinctive and contrasting zones: in May it is all carpeted in a sea of bluebells.

From the ride stop entrance a track rises to a plateau and hard standing. This type of hard, lean ground is a perfect habitat for wild orchids and woodland herbs and is a stunning sight in summer. The plateau area is framed with the backdrop of the small crags that represent the upper boundary. Dry ground conditions here create a secluded space and would make an site to build a woodland shelter or to set up a campsite.

To the right of the access track is the quarry den, an enchanting area for young and old to explore and with maturing timber. A wide range of broadleaf deciduous species such as oak, elm, ash, willow and yew are some of the trees that bring this woodland to life. Above the crags are some fine mature trees that dominate the skyline.

Moving more to the north east, away from the plateau area, the gorse and broom make excellent cover for wildlife and ground dwelling or nesting birds. The whole effect is a rare woodland of quite exceptional diversity, atmosphere and is truly worth exploring.

Surrounding area:

Quarry Den Wood is located close to Fordell Firs, a well-known Scout camp, and to Fordell Castle, a restored 16th Century tower house. Dunfermline is within ten minutes drive and Edinburgh is within thirty minutes: Quarry Den would make a great and easily accessible bolthole from city life. Fife, bounded to the north by the Firth of Tay and to the south by the Firth of Forth, is a natural peninsula whose political boundaries have changed little over the ages. Legend has it that the Pictish realm was divided into seven sub-kingdoms or provinces, one of which went on to become Fife.

The purchasers of the woodland will be asked to enter into a covenant to ensure the quiet and peaceful enjoyment of adjoining woodlands and meadows.

How to find this woodland

You are welcome to visit this wood by yourself, but please ensure that you have a copy of these sales details with you - many of our woodlands do not have mobile phone reception or internet access so we recommend either printing the details or downloading them to your phone/tablet/laptop.

Do remember to also check that it is still available for sale. If you have seen the woodland and wish to be accompanied on a second more detailed visit please contact our local manager.
