Description

Adlais means Echo in Welsh. The popular woodland is named after this poem:

'The bridge named Echo — tall and fine

A work of wonder in our time

Did span the Gele Gorge so steep

And through the bridge did patients peep.'

The woodland is in the grounds of the former Abergele chest hospital, now the eye hospital. The bridge is a hidden gem and steeped in history. A contract was awarded to S F Hopley of Prestatyn for the sum of £12,822 in 1925. 'The completed bridge spanned 315 feet in length rising to 96 feet in height above Gele stream. The bridge was named by the resident children as “The Echo Bridge”.

The woodland itself runs adjacent to the Nant Gele stream, and is accessed along a newly refurbished track suitable for cars. To the east is mainly mature larch and coniferous trees whilst the west is a newly replanted coniferous patch. Along the riverside is a mix of Ash, Beech amongst other broadleaves.

The main track is easily accessible, and there are numerous tracks leading through the dense growth that could be opened up. The woodland is full of wildlife, from deer to voles and badgers.

An added bonus to this woodland is the pedestrian access point from above the bridge. This leads to a 'plateau' alongside the public footpath. From here the views across the woodland and over the bridge are magical.

The purchasers of the woodland will be asked to enter into a covenant to ensure the quiet and peaceful enjoyment of adjoining woodlands and meadows.

Trees

What a wide variety of trees there are in Coed yr Adlais.

Listed below is a small selection:

Larch

Oak

Beech

Willow

Yew

Holly

Cedar

Alder

Douglas fir

Wildlife

Lots of birds: Jay, woodcock, redstarts, woodpeckers, siskins, ravens and lots of the little brown ones. Large mammals include deer and badgers.

Features

Coed yr Adlais is in three main sections intersected by the Afon Gele.

To the west is steep in parts with a plateau overlooking the bridge. To the east, adjoining the hospital grounds are well spaced coniferous trees on a bank.

Access, tracks and footpaths

There is a newly refurbished track leading to a car parking and turning circle. This track continues along the river's edge to the bridge, although not a public right of way.

Along the western boundary is a little used public footpath.

Rights and covenants

The purchasers of the woodland will be asked to enter into a covenant to ensure the quiet and peaceful enjoyment of adjoining woodlands and meadows.

Local area and history

Abergele, meaning "mouth of the Gele" in Welsh, is a historic market town on the North Wales coast with roots dating back to a 9th-century Celtic monastery and potential Roman origins. It became a significant medieval lordship center, known for the 13th-century St. Michael's Church and the imposing 19th-century Gwrych Castle.

The history of Abergele Hospital can be found here.

Gwrych Castle nearby has an interesting past: https://www.conwyvalleynorthwalescoast.com/station/abergele-and-pensarn/

Gele is a dialectal form of gelau, which means spear, describing the action or speed of the river cutting through the land.

How to find this woodland

You are welcome to visit this wood by yourself, but please ensure that you have a copy of these sales details with you - many of our woodlands do not have mobile phone reception or internet access so we recommend either printing the details or downloading them to your phone/tablet/laptop.
