Description

Wingtip Wood is an Ancient Semi-natural Woodland (ASNW) as designated by Natural England. Ancient Woodland has been under constant tree cover since at least 1600AD. It is valued as a rich reserve of biodiversity. The presence of hard ferns and bluebells carpeting the forest floor highlights the woodland's ancient origins, as both are recognised indicators of ancient woodland. Wingtip Wood forms part of the larger Brogues Wood area, surrounded by meadows to the north and neighbouring woodlands to the east. The open meadows provide stunning views, creating an ideal spot for bird and insect watching across the sunlit landscape. A rustic bench tucked away in a private clearing in the woodland offers a peaceful place to sit and fully immerse yourself in nature.

Wingtip Wood is situated approx. 3km south-west of Biddenden and 4km north-east of Benenden in the county of Kent. A private stoned track provides access to the wood. There is a place for a new owner to park within the wood itself.

The purchasers of the woodland will be asked to enter into a covenant to ensure the quiet and peaceful enjoyment of adjoining woodlands and meadows.

Trees

Wingtip Wood features a diverse range of broadleaf tree species – mature oak, birch, sweet chestnut, hornbeam, alder, hazel, ash and hawthorn. Chestnut can be used as a firewood - it has a reasonable heat output, flame, and burn time. Birch is also a great option for a wood-burning stove as, even though it's a hardwood, it burns quickly but produces a lot of heat.

A draft Woodland Management Plan for Brogues Wood (of which Wingtip Wood is a part) is available upon request. There is a Tree Preservation Order on a very narrow strip along the north edge of Wingtip Wood (details of this TPO are available upon request), though this does not prevent normal forest management when covered by a Forestry Commission approved woodland management plan. Wingtip Wood sits within the Local Wildlife Site known as Sandpit Wood. Details of this can be downloaded from here.

Wildlife

Muntjac, roe and fallow deer have been recorded in the vicinity of the woodland.

A number of priority invertebrate species have been recorded in the vicinity including butterflies such as dingy skipper, wood white, white admiral, heath fritillary, grizzled skipper and small pearl bordered fritillary. Diversifying the woodland structure (e.g. by coppicing, thinning and glade creation) could also result in improved habitat for these species.

It is certain that bat species will be present and will make use of the woodland and open areas within it for foraging. Species recorded in the vicinity include soprano pipistrelle, noctule, and brown long-eared bats.

Local area and history

The wood is situated approx. 3km south-west of Biddenden and 4km north-east of Benenden in the county of Kent. The nearby village of Biddenden was in the 1300's part of an important centre for Broadcloth manufacture, with much of the very attractive high street built during this period. Biddenden Vineyard is located nearby, which in addition to producing some fine wines, is also Kent's largest cider producer.

Ordnance Survey maps indicate that the areas currently under pasture were until at least the 1960s also under woodland but were subsequently deforested. However, the external woodland boundaries have changed very little since the mid-nineteenth century. There are some features of potential local archaeological interest in the wider woodland, including external wood-banks and ditches, remains of old tracks, and pits.
